Headline:
Dry and mostly sunny today but feeling cold.

Today:
It will be a generally dry day with plenty of bright autumnal sunshine, however it will feel much colder than yesterday, particularly where exposed to the chilly northerly breeze. Some patchy cloud may develop in places, particularly during the afternoon. Maximum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Tonight:
A few showers in Shropshire and Staffordshire this evening. Otherwise, dry and becoming cold and frosty. Clouding over after midnight with temperatures rising and showery rain arriving from the north. Minimum temperature 0 deg C (32 deg F).

Friday:
Cloudy with periods of rain at first. Skies brightening by lunchtime, with heavy blustery showers, and some hail mixed in at times, these turning wintry over the hills later. Windy. Maximum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Very windy and cold on Saturday, with sunshine and showers, wintry over hills. Sunnier with lighter winds on Sunday. Turning cloudier with rain at times on Monday and less cold.
